I love music, but I loved both of them when I was moved by them. When they force me to feel something, that's what we remember. The people we hold on to when we don't have anything else. People who give us comfort help us remember and connect us in ways we can't explain. We can all choose the latest Disney and Pixar movies to grab a song that makes a chart or become something so iconic that we'll love it or hate it forever (think let it go from frozen or happy from me that's nasty). However, some of the best songs have been forgotten or unplayed for a long time because they haven't sold millions of downloads on iTunes. I chose what I felt or wanted at the time. If I'm ready to run, I want something different from when I go out for a leisurely stroll in my neighborhood. If I want something to sing (not very good, I might add) then who knows what I might find. Being an adult doesn't mean we should miss a movie that gets the G-rated most often, though. The film reflects real life through struggles that show guilt and uncertainty. Often, the characters in these films are faced with the decision they want, only that they can be undone after knowing the results, just as we often experience, but in life there are times when we fail miserably and we achieve greatness as well. Perhaps that's why I've never missed a new animated film - there may be hidden treasures buried somewhere in the soundtrack I might fall in love with and want. The music captured those moments for us and attached the melody so we could sing. These songs aren't in any particular order, but life works like that sometimes as well, somewhere there. - From American Tail (by Linda Ronstadt and James Ingram) Sometimes our lives take us on a journey that sets us apart from the ones we love the most, and the best way to get through the day until we see them again is to know that someone misses you. We feel them and embrace their love, even if we are separated for miles. This song puts me at ease when I feel a little lonely, and although our lives are messy and chaotic, I know I love it. We can't live anywhere, but our love can do The Trail We Blaze – from The Road to El Dorado (by Elton John). To find something on the other side that will be exciting and not hold back in fear of discovering life, we may not always know what is the end of the road and may not lead us to the lost golden city. But that's not what matters in the end. Being a trailblazer means stepping out of the crowd and pursuing a dream we can only see. It means starting a conversation... It means standing up when others sit down. All the great changes in the world are possible because people are not restricted by consistency and we should follow their leaders and may cause a little ruckus themselves! On a cloudy day, we look for a large orange that glows in the sky, and we rely on it not only to warn the earth, but it gives us hope. Things in life don't always go as we'd like, and disappointment may be waiting around the corner. But this song made me believe, hold on and be strong. It reminds us that life is always full of change. Someone is waiting for you - from The Rescuers (by Lea Salonga) our journey, life and passion, sometimes we find ourselves lost, unable to find a way home. It's easy to believe that we can be easily forgotten. - But who would say that no matter how long it takes, no matter why you leave, you will not be greeted with open arms and even more loved? Sometimes we feel the need to see what's out there and without knowing what we're doing, we walk away from one thing. In our lives, we find very few people to do anything and everything that will be there for you. Never Take Them To Here I Am – From The Spirit, The Pony of Cimarron (by Brian Adams), there is no great song about being true to ourselves and what we want more than this ballad. In it, I found comfort in knowing that there was a risk of chasing what seemed to be not far away, and knowing that I was worth more than anything. We can lose property and fall on our faces. But if we don't know who we are or what we believe, then nothing matters. If we don't know who we are, This song reminds me to stop hiding behind everything that scares me and believes in the freedom that comes with the truth found in our essence and spirit. With a life full of busy and sometimes chaotic moments, the best thing you can do is stop worrying about everything. We spend a lot of energy and time in situations that may never happen. It doesn't mean the madness is gone, it means we have to step away from it for a while. It's our little holiday. Our Escape Of course, we know the real world is still out there, but sometimes our philosophy has to be once a day, and what we don't know now is we'll figure it out when we need it later. Make your motto pass each day. Around Riverbend - from Pocahontas (by Arielle Jacobs), we have a sense of adventure that excites us, and even if we don't know what happens next, fear won't make us do what excites us and what moves us. Being in the same place is not an option, and pushing the envelope is always on our agenda. Our endless curiosity to see what's out there and how we can interact with it is how we cheat the old ness of a boring existence. We broke a few rules along the way and saw things from different perspectives, allowing our minds to grow in a way that we might otherwise miss. Go ahead Take the top spot, it's probably everything you need. You have a friend in me - from Toy Story (by Randy Newman), no matter who we are, we all need friends. It's not just the kind of friends who show up when they need something or when it's convenient. But people will do anything for us. They are committed to your friendship and want to want to give you as much as you want. You may not always look in the eye and you may say something you may regret later. But when it comes to it, you have each other's backs. Either way, it's thick and thin. When everything is said and done, the man is no better than the friend he has and the friendship he gives. Why do I need to worry? - From Oliver & Company (by Billy Joel), no matter where we come from or how much we know, we can't always plan for life. We must adapt to the ever-changing landscape, the errors and blocking of roads that come our way and improve when necessary. Expect, but we know that carrying anxiety and uncertainty is not our best life. Walking high and confident through life will teach us to be strong and courageous when things don't go our way, even if we don't have an answer to every question. You'll be in my mind - from Tarzan (by Phil Collins). Having three children of herself and sending the last one out to college last year, the song was one of many. The people who make me happy and sad at the same time. Mother's love never leaves, and it is love that can't be forgotten or misplaced no matter how far the child travels. Sometimes our families are not the ones we were born to, but the ones we connect with and love without boundaries. Our loved ones never go to the day without feeling our love, and when the moment you have shared a short or never seem to be enough, let them know this. You're always in my mind closer than you think, reflected - from Mulan (by Lea Salonga), who doesn't have parents leading us to career or college choice? Who thinks they have to be the ones they don't really, but follow the path that was paved for them because it's easier? If our main goal in life is to be happy, then the people who love us the most should want that most for us as well. Sometimes we don't know who we are, and on a journey through life, we truly find ourselves. Don't be afraid to look at yourself in the mirror and see what's in your heart and soul. It can be a little scary, but it's something we'll never forget. - At that moment, we can no longer hold it. We're just the ones we were born to be, when you believe - from The Prince of Egypt (by Mariah Carey) don't know the power behind a single faith until it happens to me. I don't understand how a single idea can change everything. It convinces you that everything you can't see or touch is still important. You may be pulled in a direction that you can hardly share. Miracles happen and show us everything, no matter where we come from, where things happen to us, sometimes life gives us moments that change us forever. It's not about what we know or how far we go to school, but the real power comes when you believe - because anything is possible. A little wonder - from Meet Robinson (by Rob Thomas) as we look back on life, we can choose a really bad piece that we hope we won't live. Every day we are faced with seemingly insignificant small moments that make us grounded in a way that the big ones will not. Most of us are too busy to pay attention to anything other than what's in front of us. Every once in a while, what looks like a real wrong turn leads us to where we intend to live forever. Don't be so busy in life that you miss the little wonders that become really big memories, feel the light – from home (by Jennifer Lopez). Grab our hands and push us into situations we don't want and fall into a rough mess, act well in its purpose. We stumbled, we lost our way, we gave up. This song gives me hope in a place I never thought to look at, and it confirms that love is the greatest thing of all. We all choose and feel that we have to be with them forever. But that's not true... We can make changes, even if it's not what others will do. True friendships are making its rounds through life, but in the end it often finds itself back. Sometimes you just have to fight for it again. God Help Outcasts - From The Hunchback from Notre Dame (by Bette Midler), no one really fits us all differently, but we strive to assert with the crowds and the norms that society created for us. Some days we don't know where to go, we don't have an answer and we feel alone. Perhaps we believe that no one will understand what we feel, or we are afraid to be vulnerable to someone. Honestly, we don't even know what we want. But we seem to lose feelings of selfishness when we let others unconditionally know that fighting is good. We strive to be enthusiastic and generous to those with less. We want to alleviate the suffering of those who are bullied, make fun and be fired insignificantly. We all need to be reminded of our differences and celebrate them together instead. Rainbow Connection - From the movie Muppet (by Kermit the Frog), OK, you caught me. This isn't really an animated film, but I grew up watching The Muppets every Sunday night at 7pm and it's important to remind us that all rainbows come after rain. Life can lead to storms, and even if we don't know how long it will last, But we know that the sun will come out tomorrow (which may come from another film) and we can see the light again, not because we believe there is a pot of gold at the end of the rainbow, but because there is a little magic held in the way that the light reflects those droplets. This song reminds me of the power of dreams and why each one means something to the owner. Summary: The best soundtrack comes with great scores and lots of awards, but as far as achieving those awards are important, sometimes the melodies and the best words that are edgy together are hidden behind something less. The basic principles of a successful cartoon in the expression of human emotion can be difficult to achieve without listening to music. Some of these songs are dust-picking and forgotten and recently identified as a track on a CD, just because a high-profile actor or actor doesn't give a voice for the main character, doesn't mean the film is worthless. Most often hidden. It's who we need to find ourselves. Life is about living and all the challenges and opportunities that come with it. Some days are easier than others. Some come with questions, while others give answers. We also find hope, curiosity and love in the moments we capture in life as we pursue our dreams and make good friends along the way as well. Let these songs become your favorite new playlists and when you have a chance to watch movies too. Photo credit: Oscar Keys via unsplash.com unsplash.com
